Keeping Baby Afloat

IS your child too young to Swim?

Many South Florida residents take advantage of the year-round warm weather with a swimming pool and other water-based amenities.

However, these present a considerable danger for our children: drowning.

Unintentional drowning is the leading cause of death in South Florida of children age 8 and younger.

The number of deaths due to drowning in Florida in children age 5 and younger is more than double the national average and is higher than all other states. Broward, Miami-Dade and Palm Beach counties are among the top five counties in the state for highest number of deaths in this age group.

South Florida officials recommend teaching children water and swimming skills as early as possible by enrolling them in local swimming programs.

There are many swimming programs in South Florida offering classes to children to help in building a foundation necessary in preventing drowning in young children between the ages of 24 months and 5 years old.

Lessons with Julie teach private one-on-one lessons to children starting at 6 months. They include five 30-minute-consecutive-day-sessions. For your convenience, she comes to your pool to teach the lessons. If you don't have a pool, Julie can schedule the lessons in their pool. For more information about her lessons please visit her web site at www.lessonswithjulie.com.

Since the cost to operate your pool pump isn't itemized on your electric bill.
